

The Watern' Gazelle

October 22, 1886

Little Sure Shot is surprisingly enough the daughter of none other than Mayor Mickie Killion and wife Linda. They had only this to say about their wayward daughter, "We tried our best."

Once in town, they were never far from the local establishment of ill repute. The Watern' Hole. Carousing and highfalutin went on late into every night growing ever more prominent with the appearance of Clementine "Boss" Weeks and the notorious Duckling Gang. After her arrival, it was no longer safe to walk the streets of our fine town. The sheriff soon decided that enough was enough and gathered a posse of 20 heavily armed men to apprehend the band of devilish desperadoes. The city was searched but the only thing found that fine Sunday morning was a note posted on a stall door that read, "Thanks for the hospitality boys, see you next fall."

Well folks, she is up to her old tricks. Erica "Little Sure Shot" Killion has struck again. Raining havoc down on the poor citizens of Tulsa causing mischief and mayhem wherever she went. As always, by her side were those wiley outlaws Ray "Pour Me Another" and Vicki "Fast Draw" Tobin. They rode into town one late September night and stayed just long enough to make sure the good people of OK would not soon forget the names and escapades of these rampaging renegades.

Since that day, not many have seen the sharp shooting cowgirl, but rest assured, they will be back next fall to terrorize the populous and solidify their infamous names in the pages of history.
